Case 101 Around the World: Successful Surgery for a Young Patient with a Rare Medical Condition

A 12-year-old patient visited the vascular surgery clinic at the Idlib Specialized Surgical Hospital, complaining of a mass on the left side of the neck that appears during reading, exertion, and breathing, along with a distinctive hoarseness.

Investigations using ultrasound Doppler and CT scans revealed a rare case of internal jugular vein dilation of more than 5 cm.

Follow here for details about the rare surgery and how it was successfully completed:

OCHA Meets with Protection Workers at Sema in Northern Syria

To achieve the best level of coordination among humanitarian workers in northern Syria and the United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA), Sema organized two meetings this week between humanitarian actors and representatives from the OCHA office in the city of al-Bab.

These meetings aim to enhance communication channels between field workers and UN officials to discuss challenges, needs, and facilitate direct communication with contact officials at the UN.

Mustafa Alwan: I Feel the Surgical Hospital is Part of My Soul—I Was a Founder, Assistant Surgeon, and Patient Receiving Treatment

From the very first day of establishing the specialized surgical hospital, assistant surgeon Mustafa Alwan has been present.

He says, «Before the hospital opened, I began my journey treating those injured by gunfire during protests.

We used to provide first aid in mosques. Later, after the city fell out of the regime's control and the specialized surgical hospital was launched, I started offering specialized medical services.»
